

THE MAYFAIR

JUNE 2014 • ISSUE 033 • £5.00

MAGAZINE

Summer in the City

Roksanda Ilincic and Simon Rogan make their Mayfair debut, while Alain Ducasse takes us on a culinary tour of London; plus, British pageantry at its best

RUNWILD
MEDIA GROUP

9 772053 609004 08 >

Golden Sunray peridot brooch
£1,550 by Kate Rieppel

Gold 'Peace' dove brooch with citrine body, £3,850 by Mahtab Hanna

A STONE'S THROW

Pearl and aquamarine
cocktail ring, £3,200
by Beau Han Xu

Haptic ring, £3,360
by Dorry Hsu

Kaleidoscope earrings
£1,600 by Youjin Nam

Gemstones, timeless jewels that they are, can have many lives. They can be passed down through generations, bequeathed to entirely new guardians, or travel through life with one, loyal owner. And antique pieces of jewellery with truly lasting style can find themselves in the elegant windows of Susannah Lovis in the Burlington Arcade, which is now celebrating 15 years in this iconic location.

To mark this occasion, Lovis launched the Susannah Lovis Award 2014, bringing the timeless beauty of jewellery together with the talent of emerging young jewellery designers in London. The finalists – seven second-year students from the Goldsmithing, Silversmithing, Metalwork and Jewellery department at the Royal College of Art – each produced a piece of jewellery using precious and semi-precious stones donated by Lovis, which were judged by head of programme professor Hans Stofer and senior tutor Michael Rowe, The Mayfair Magazine's deputy editor, Kate Racovolis and Lovis herself. Students were asked 'to consider the past life of these stones, reflect the emotions of their previous owners and to create pieces to be cherished by future generations suitable for sale in the shop in Burlington Arcade.'

After much deliberation, the prize was given to Beau Han Xu for his baroque-style, aquamarine, pearl and rhodiumed silver ring. The piece conjures visions of elegant coral, where the aquamarine acts as the centrepiece with gentle arms of rhodiumed silver encasing the stone. Han Xu's accomplished piece shows a true attention to detail and will be on sale in Lovis' shop – alongside the other pieces – until 20 June – seriously stylish recycling. M
Susannah Lovis, 50 Burlington Arcade, W1J
(020 7493 2008; susannahlovis.com)

Gold net drop pearl
and diamond earrings,
£1,550 by Rui Bao

Bee tie clip in 18-carat gold,
£1,550 by Niels
Ranheimsaeter